Chapter 1241

The Husson Residence was a large, imposing structure with eight Roman-inspired columns supporting the awning above the main entrance. The architecture symbolized the strength and power of the family.

Despite her advanced age, Charlotte insisted on giving birth to her only child, so that she could continue with the upper family line. However, thirty-three years had passed, and the young master of the family showed no interest in marrying. His parents were almost eighty years old. They were eager to see him settle down and have children of their own before they passed away.

The elderly couple decided to make Ren a match. Ren had come home that night and noticed a young woman sitting next to her mother. The young woman's face lit up when she saw it.

Then Charlotte beckoned to her son and said, "Ren, come here. There is someone I would like you to go.meet."

He knew instantly what his mother's intention was, and calmly approached his mother and sat down next to her.

"This is Sophie Liamson, Emmett's niece. She is twenty-six years old this year and is a world-class piano teacher. I think a nice and suitable young lady like her is a good match for you." The old lady. he seemed to have decided to take Sophie in as his daughter-in-law.

Charlotte was particularly anxious because she would bring home any girl she considered as a potential partner for her everdemanding son.

"It's an honor to meet you, Ren. I've heard a lot about you from Uncle Emmett," Sophie greeted shyly, but was secretly delighted.

She couldn't believe Charlotte had noticed her. She was invited to the Husson Residence to meet Ren in person due to Emmett's efforts to curry favor with the old woman. Sophie had arrived at the Husson Residence in the early afternoon. Half the day had passed. with Charlotte and Harold.

Moreover, he had impressed them by skillfully maneuvering into intellectual conversation and displaying charming etiquette. It was safe to say that the old couple approved of her.

Ren smiled and said, "Nice to meet you, Sophie. Welcome to the Husson Residence."

Sophie misinterpreted his smile as a sign that he had feelings for her. Although he had only seen it on TV, he looked even more handsome in person. In addition, his regal air did his fainting. His heart began to pound. She told herself that she should seize this opportunity and make a good impression. She could become the next lady of the house if she can pull it off. Moreover, she could become the wife of the future vice president of the country! This might be the most crucial moment of his life, and he couldn't afford to let it slip through his fingers.

So, Charlotte hurriedly excused herself and muttered something about checking the dishes in the kitchen. His intention was to allow Ren and Sophie to spend time together alone.

Consequently, they were left alone on the couch alone with the other as company.
